DANIEL ELLSBERG
ESPIONAGE-X

On December 29, 1971, a Federal Grand Jury, Los Angeles, California, returned a fifteen count indictment charging Daniel Ellsberg with five counts and Anthony J. Russo with one count of violation of the Theft of Government Property statute, Title 18, Section 641, United States Code; charging Ellsberg with six counts and Russo with two counts of violation of the Espionage statute, Title 18, Section 793, United States Code; and charging Ellsberg and Russo with one count of Conspiracy to Violate the Theft of Government Property statute, Title 18, Section 371, United States Code. Lynda Rae Sinay and Vu Van Thai were named as unindicted co-conspirators. Bench warrants for Ellsberg and Russo were issued on December 29, 1971, by Federal District Court Judge E. Avery Crary in Los Angeles. On December 30, 1971, Russo surrendered to the United States Marshal, Los Angeles, and was released on $5,000 Personal Recognizance Bond. Attorneys for Ellsberg agreed that Ellsberg would surrender on January 4, 1972, at which time he would appear along with Russo before Federal District Court Judge William Matthew Byrne in Los Angeles for arraignment and plea.

On January 4, 1972, Ellsberg and Russo appeared before Judge Byrne in United States District Court, Los Angeles. Ellsberg personally entered a plea of not guilty to all counts and at the request of Russo's attorney the Court entered a plea of not guilty for Russo.

The following exhibits are identified in or appear to have direct evidentiary pertinence to the fifteen count indictment against Ellsberg and Russo. The exhibit numbers, descriptions, identities of officials having custody and identities of officials to be subpoenaed for production and/or interpretation are set forth.

Spencer B. Marx allowed Daniel Ellsberg to utilize a room in his apartment in Cambridge, Massachusetts for office space and was in Cambridge at the time the "Pentagon papers" were published. He is also known to have allowed Ellsberg to store material with his, Marx's, personal belongings with at least two storage companies, one in Boston area and one in Monterey, California. This material was removed by an associate of Ellsberg, in 8/71. The whereabouts of Ellsberg was unknown between 6/17 and 6/28/71 and could possibly have been utilizing Marx's cabin at Big Sur, California, during this time.

Memorandum to Mr. E. S. Miller
RE: LEAKS OF CLASSIFIED INFORMATION TO THE PRESS
62-08194

A bench warrant was issued for Anthony J. Russo, Jr., at Los Angeles on 12/28/71 based on a 15 count indictment returned by the Federal Grand Jury naming Russo and Ellsberg as codefendants in this matter. On 12/30/71 Russo was surrendered by his attorney to the Office of the Federal Public Defender at Los Angeles. Prior to his surrender we had determined that Russo

[redacted] was interviewed yesterday by the Los Angeles Office and revealed [redacted] met Russo through a mutual acquaintance who had been an employee of the Rand Corporation in Santa Monica. She met Russo several years ago and has seen him periodically since on purely a social basis, mainly when Russo would stop at her home to visit her and her family. Russo recently introduced his current wife, Kitty Barkley, to [redacted] and her family. [redacted] professed she possessed no information regarding Russo's involvement with Ellsberg in the acquisition of the classified documents in this matter other than information obtained through public news media. She stated that Russo has complained of harassment from authorities and curiosity seekers and on his visits to her home she has attempted to offer him a haven and there has been no discussion of his involvement in these matters. [redacted] has met Ellsberg on only one occasion at a fund-raising affair [redacted] location and date unrecalled. Interviewing Agents noted [redacted] appeared somewhat disoriented and naive and appears to attempt [redacted]

The home appears to be constantly filled with people so associated with the family, Russo being just one of the many.

A local publication in Great Neck, New York, has carried an advertisement indicating a discussion by Ellsberg and one Fred Braffman on 1/30/72 at the Great Neck South Senior High School on the topic "The Escalated Air War"—"The Newest Deception of the American People." Appearances by Ellsberg and Braffman are being sponsored by the Co-op for Peace, Box 274, Great Neck, New York.

Braffman has been described as director of "Project Air War," self-described as a nine person research group which "has more information about the expanding air war and automated battlefields in Southeast Asia and war documentation of the fact that the war is not winding down than any group except the

The purpose of "Movement Speakers" is to book radical speakers on college campuses.

November 1971.

Dear Classmate:

At our 20th Reunion we heard our classmate Dan Ellsberg discuss his deep concern about our right to knowledge of the conduct of our foreign policy by the federal government.

As we know, he has been indicted in federal court as a result of admitted acts of assistance to Congress and the national press in their task of informing the public. At serious personal risk, he has made information available so that the country can better know, evaluate and judge the acts of our government.

Now Dan is faced with the burden of conducting a protracted and exacting legal defense. It will take, at the minimum, two years or so, and involve the sustained efforts of a team of constitutional lawyers, including Leonard Boudin and Charles Nesson of the Harvard Law School. We are informed by knowledgeable members of the legal profession (such as our classmate Bob Herzstein of Arnold and Porter in Washington, D.C.) that such a defense, with extensive grand jury investigations, travel and telephone costs for hearings and trials in Los Angeles and Boston, plus the possibility of several appeals, can reasonably cost as much as $250,000.

We believe that both Dan and others subpoenaed in the case are entitled to counsel of high competence with the philosophical depth that will allow a full and serious hearing of the significant issues. As Harvard classmates nurtured in the tradition of independent thought and conscientious dissent, we have decided to share our concern that Dan's legal defense fund receive maximum financial help from friends and classmates of Harvard '52.

We feel our class can raise at least $20,000, and the thirty-five of us who are sending this letter have pledged over $4,000 of this amount. Dan, his wife, and their respective families have already contributed over $40,000 to his legal defense, and further support from this source is limited.

We hope you will join us in sending your check toward Dan's defense, made out to "Harvard '52 Ellsberg Defense Fund." (The fund will be set up in The Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company, and administered by Arthur Contas, Charlie Cabot and Neal Hastie. Names of contributors will be held by the committee and not given to any other persons for any other purposes. In the highly unlikely event that the case is completed before the fund is completely dispersed, a pro rata refund will be made.)

DETAILS:

NY 65-25641

Investigation has established that DANIEL ELLSBERG resided at the Albert Pick Motor Inn in Washington, D. C. for the period November 1, 1971 through November 3, 1971, during which time he was charged for one long distance telephone call to 212-758-9079. This number has been previously identified as being listed to PATRICIA ELLSBERG at her apartment located at 45 Sutton Place South, New York City.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date 12/22/711

[REDACTED] when contacted concerning her knowledge of DANIEL and PATRICIA ELLSBERG, advised she has known Mrs. ELLSBERG [REDACTED] advised that she has met DANIEL ELLSBERG on only one occasion in the ELLSBERG apartment at Sutton Place South, New York City. She advised her relationship with the ELLSBERGs has been [REDACTED] and she knows nothing concerning the ELLSBERGs and their involvement with the "Pentagon Papers". She did offer the comment that she considers PATRICIA ELLSBERG to be a wonderful person.

 when contacted concerning possible knowledge on her part of a recent trip to the Caribbean area by DANIEL and PATRICIA ELLSBERG, advised that she did recently book such a trip. She asked the interviewing agents as to whether or not she is required by law to furnish information concerning this trip. She was advised the Federal Bureau of Investigation was soliciting her cooperation in this matter, but that she was within her rights to refuse. At this point, she noted she did not wish to cooperate. She advised that while she would not take the time to check her records, she did recall that the ELLSBERGS traveled to St. Thomas from New York via Eastern Air Lines.

 was interviewed on December 9, 1971, at which time he was advised the interview was being conducted at the request of Assistant Attorney General, Internal Security Division.

[REDACTED] Mrs. ~~Idella R. B. Marx~~ Idella
 he has known IDELLA RUTH ~~MARX~~ since he was about [REDACTED] He described her as a close N.Y. friend who was also a friend of his parents. He noted that she keeps in very close contact with him and speaks to him regularly on the telephone. He noted that shortly after the Pentagon Papers were made public, when she attempted to speak to him about this matter, he told her that as the result of these disclosures in the newspapers, he felt that there would be an investigation of some magnitude conducted by the United States Government and that he wished to have no personal knowledge of what transpired in connection with their publication. Since that time, they have discussed the Pentagon Papers in the most general terms. She has never made any statement to him about any possible participation on her part. He noted it was his own opinion based upon his knowledge of her that she would not have played any part personally. He indicated that when the papers were discussed, the type of question that would be discussed was whether or not DANIEL ELLSBERG had done the right thing. Idella R. B. Marx

She has also discussed in general her appearance before the Grand Jury in Boston and has made statements concerning how well she has been treated in her appearance before the Grand Jury. He noted she also discussed with him the publicity that the publication of the Pentagon Papers received and he recalled that he told her that in his opinion the Government's move to suppress publication was the main cause that the Pentagon Papers received so much publicity.

[REDACTED] specifically questioned concerning a call placed to him by IDELLA MARX on June 14, 1971 from Massachusetts. He stated that he received so many calls from Mrs. MARX, that he could recall no details whatever concerning this call. He could not state the time he might have received the call inasmuch as she calls him at various hours. He did note that at the present time she is helping him redecorate his apartment.

In connection with DANIEL ELLSBERG himself, [REDACTED] advised he met him only once for a period of about two minutes, long before the Pentagon Papers were published. He reiterated he has no information in his possession relating to the publication of the Pentagon Papers and the individuals involved other than what he has read in the newspapers and what he has discussed generally with Mrs. MARX as outlined above.

Prior investigation has established that an Ingento paper cutter, model 5 1/2 or 1151, was found in the abandoned apartment of SPENCER MARX, apartment 3-D, 4 Trowbridge Place, Cambridge, Massachusetts, in early September, 1971. Investigation has also established that DANIEL ELLSBERG used this apartment as an office in the Spring of 1971, and it has also been noted that Mrs. IDELLA MARX reportedly purchased a paper cutter at Goldsmith's Stationers, White Plains, New York.

On December 6, 1971

[REDACTED] te
[REDACTED], New York, advised [REDACTED] that his company does not stock Ingento paper cutters and, in fact, he himself had never heard of this name or brand of paper cutter. He also noted that a review of [REDACTED] accounts reflect that IDELLA RUTH MARX, of Bedford, New York, does not maintain an account with this store, and that it would be impossible to trace any purchases made by her.

[REDACTED] Storage Company Incorporated, 2224 Del Monte Avenue, advised that SPENCER MARX, Big Sur, California, has been a customer since May 24, 1971. The Company received a call from MARX on May 24, 1971, requesting a pickup for furniture at his Big Sur cabin, which was handled on May 26, 1971, and placed in storage in their facilities in Monterey.

On July 3, 1971, MARX received a shipment of furniture at Big Sur which he had shipped from his residence at 4 Trowbridge Place, Cambridge, Massachusetts. This shipment was loaded on June 15, 1971, by Casey and Hayes, Inc., of Boston, Massachusetts. Both Casey and Hayes and Wermuth Storage Company are agents for Allied Van Lines. On July 8, 1971, part of the Cambridge shipment was picked up at MARX's cabin and placed in storage by Wermuth Storage in Monterey.

On August 2, 1971, an unknown white male adult appeared at Wermuth Storage, Monterey, and requested a suitcase, (Item Number 270), which was stored, according to this individual, in the name of "MARX or ELLSBERG". It was explained to this individual that twenty-four hour notice is required to remove any item from storage when authorized by consignee. This individual was very insistent, stating that he must leave immediately for the East Coast. Arrangements were made to call SPENCER MARX, who authorized release of the requested material. This individual received the suitcase and signed a delivery receipt, however, signature not discernible but appears to be "D. OBST."

On August 4, 1971, this person returned to Wermuth Storage in Monterey and stated that he picked up the wrong package and wanted a second item, which was a pasteboard carton marked "CASEY and HAYES". This was Item 271 from MARX's storage. A delivery receipt was signed and this individual stated upon returning to the East Coast on August 2, 1971, he determined he had the wrong package and made a special trip back to pick up this particular carton. When asked why the material was so important, this person stated that SPENCER MARX is a writer and this material is to be used in a book which he is publishing.

On August 31, 1971, additional household effects were picked up at MARX's cabin in Big Sur and placed in storage. Part of this storage lot was shipped to New York City and at the present time MARX has a small storage lot in addition to the original shipment, which was picked up on May 26, 1971, and listed in the name of BETTINA TOLERTON.

ELLSBERG

EPITOME OF BOURGEOIS RADICAL

by NEWTON H. FULBRIGHT

Much of what we know about Daniel Ellsberg is gleaned from the New York Times. But before getting on with Ellsberg, an observation about The Times: In accomplishing its avowed purpose of printing all the news fit to print, The Times on occasion confounds us. In the matter of heroes, for instance. We are not supposed to have any, this being the age in which everybody is pretty well leveled out, but we do have these "beautiful people."

They are fascinating and indeed quite perplexing to write about. They jet about the country from coast to coast. We glimpse them through the picture windows of their East Side New York City pads and at sumptuous country estates. They enjoy all that money can buy -- sip champagne in the moonlight, swim in the raw with lithe young women turned to gold in the amber light of illuminated and heated pools. They live the life of the very gods, and yet they are unhappy, we are told, and are seriously bent, in word and deed, on redress of all the ills society is heir to. There is an apparent contradiction here. But we have been enlightened in some measure by the character of Ellsberg, as he was recently introduced to us in The Times.

Ellsberg is, of course, Daniel Ellsberg, the fellow who stands accused of stealing the so-called "Pentagon Papers."

Frankly, we were never greatly concerned about these essays, put together by Ellsberg and his associates while holding down assorted government positions in the Kennedy and Johnson Administrations, not even after the New York Times began publishing last year their version of alleged secrets of U.S. foreign policy. We found the story quite contrived and, actually, anticlimactic. We had heard it all before.

Publisher: Alice Widener

It isn't our purpose, furthermore, to debate the guilt or innocence of Ellsberg.

U.S.A. is published by the U.S.A. Publishing Company, Inc., 530 East 72nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10021. Copyright in the United States, 1972. Alice Widener, President; Newton H. Fulbright; Alexander C. Dick, Secretary and Treasurer.

Rates: Twenty dollars a year in the United States. Twenty-four dollars a year elsewhere. Single copy: one dollar.

For a description of him, we are indebted to the New York Times Magazine of last December 12. It provided a profile of the radical jet set hero by staffer J. Anthony Lukas who, in gathering information for the piece, virtually lived with Ellsberg for an entire month. The result was a spirited piece of journalism. Ellsberg, it seems, is indeed a man for any season. The only adequate comment we can think of was given a few years back by a citizen of Harlem in response to a question put to him by a reporter about Adam Clayton Powell, the erstwhile Congressman. Powell was before the courts on a matter of apparent inconsistency between his style of living and the income tax he was paying the government. The Harlem constituent answered simply, "Man, how that cat do live!"

We discover Ellsberg on his 14th floor Sutton Place South pad (reporter Lukas calls it a "pied a terre"), searching for a lost notebook and greatly concerned about it since the notebook contains material for a speech Ellsberg is scheduled to deliver that evening as the recipient of the "Federal Employee of the Year" award from a group calling itself "Federal Employees for Peace." Ellsberg misses his plane connection (he catches another one, of course), but while the search goes on, reporter Lukas introduces us to Ellsberg's new wife Patricia, "daughter of Louis Marx, the millionaire toy manufacturer." The pad is her "bachelor digs." Actually, the Ellsbergs live in Cambridge across from Harvard Yard, and the Sutton Place South dig is only a casual hangout. We learn that Ellsberg is writing a book for Simon and Schuster and reflect that Pat will come in handy here. It's good to have a wife with a few million around if you are writing a book.

At dinner at La Gemma, "a catering hotel four blocks from the White House," Ellsberg still hasn't written his speech and wants to know, "Couldn't I just find a little room here where I could eat alone and write?" But, of course, this won't do.

"Oh, no," says Susan Strauss, one of the evening's organizers. "All these people want to watch you eat."

Reporter Lukas is seated next to Richard Strout of the Christian Science Monitor. Strout confides that he once wrote a piece about Ellsberg which said:

"Daniel Ellsberg looks to one observer like the kind of individual who always believes his latest conviction is the one true faith that wipes out all the heresies of the last. He will proselytize for it, and go to the stake for it."

Strout said Ellsberg called him to protest, and Lukas quotes Strout as saying, "He doesn't like to be described as intense. He doesn't want people to think he's a nut."

Nobody at the La Gemma affair thinks he is a nut. Some 1,000 cheer, stomp and whistle. Ellsberg is transported. Lukas sees him "stripped to his blue and white shirt" launching into a bitter review of his own government service, from the Marine Corps (1956) to observer in Vietnam. Ellsberg tells the La Gemma crowd:

"I remember when I went to the Rand Corporation from graduate work at Harvard, one professor said, 'You've sold out,' and I told him very seriously that serving the President was the most important role one could play. ... But reading 7,000 pages of the Pentagon Papers has shown me that the President of the United States is part of the problem."

Ellsberg is scheduled to fly to Chicago next day, but suddenly decides to go by way of Los Angeles to see his friend Tony Russo, up on a hearing in connection with his arrest and jailed for refusal to talk to a grand jury about his part in the Xeroxing of the Pentagon Papers. The trip is by jet, of course, a 747. Ellsberg settles into a first-class seat, but, up again, trots up the stairs to the lounge. "I must say the 747 puts on the best sunsets I've ever seen," he says. He and Lukas sit. Ellsberg sips a sherry, then champagne. Lukas listens to the Chicago-Minnesota football game. Ellsberg doesn't -- "I'm not a sports fan." He played the piano as a boy, he says, his mother's idea: she wanted him to be a concert pianist and took her frustration out on her son.

Ellsberg, almost with ennui, it seems, tells how he ceased to practice on the piano. His family was returning one day when he was 15 from a Fourth of July outing in the family automobile. "My mother and sister," Ellsberg says, "were killed outright. My father, who was driving and apparently fell asleep at the wheel, just had minor injuries and I broke my knee. I can remember standing in the wreckage, looking down at my mother and thinking, 'Now I don't have to be a pianist any more.'"

His father was a Chicago structural engineer. Ellsberg says, "Once I asked my father why his father had come here from Russia. 'To be free,' my father said. 'He didn't want to be drafted into the Imperial Army for seven years.' We came to be free."

And with that, Ellsberg reaches into his briefcase and pulls out a paperback copy of Bernard Bailyn's "The Ideological Origins of the American Revolution." He points to the last paragraph. "Have you ever read that?" he asks Lukas. "I've read it a dozen times, but it still moves me so much I can't read it out loud without weeping." Lukas reads the paragraph, which states:

"But some, caught up in a vision of the future in which the peculiarities of American life become the marks of a chosen people, found in the defiance of traditional order the firmest of all grounds for their hope for a freer life. ...It was only where there was this defiance, this distrust of all authority, political or social, that institutions would express human aspirations, not crush them."

Ellsberg had tears for this.

At Los Angeles, "in the neon glare of a car wash," he goes into a phone booth to call Robert, 14, and Mary, 12, his children by his first wife (the former Carol Cummings, daughter of a Marine general, whom Dan married when he was 19 and divorced in 1966).

There's no answer, so Ellsberg gets his hair cut at 11 p.m. in the home of a girl he knows in Westwood, "a songwriter who is studying to become a hairdresser." The talk is heady, about the FBI and its futile efforts to locate Ellsberg when he was underground.

At the Los Angeles Airport, Ellsberg had gone straight to an Avis counter to rent a pea-green Mustang convertible. He "hauls down the top, slings his jacket in back, flicks on the radio, and wheels the little car onto the road." Ellsberg is a different man. He talks, he sings. The radio strikes up a Russian tone poem. Lukas writes, "'Ah,' Ellsberg shouts with joyous recognition -- and with the polish of an album blurb -- 'Gliere's "Ilya Murometz," a peasant from the primeval forest of Murom who lies paralyzed for the first 30 years of his life and then, commanded by two holy wanderers, sets forth on a life of heroic adventure.'"

Sometime after midnight, Ellsberg reaches his children by phone and drives off to see them. We know nothing more about Ellsberg, however, because reporter Lukas wakes off to bed.

Next morning at 10 they are in court when U.S. District Judge Warren J. Ferguson grants a defense petition setting Russo free. The 34-year-old engineer, with "scraggy brown hair and walrus mustache" had talked freely of his part in Xeroxing the Pentagon Papers but refused to talk "behind closed doors" to the grand jury. He agrees to talk provided he is given a transcript to make public. And with this "victory," celebrating is in order.

Ellsberg persuades Russo to come to Chicago. They have an hour to catch their plane, so pile into the pea-green convertible with three women companions and take off down the Santa Ana freeway. Lukas follows in a Porsche with a German-born systems analyst at the wheel. People show up at the airport taking pictures, and of course they are FBI agents and everybody has a jolly good time. "Hey," Tony shouts, "come out and I'll pose for you." Russo, out of jail, is a card.

If Los Angeles was something, Chicago is more so. But the flight interval is for talking, recapitulation and vindication. Ellsberg pulls out a paper to exhibit something he has written to be read over a Los Angeles radio station the following week. It is headed "Some Prospects and Problems in Vietnam, February 15, 1968." Lukas reads:

"In discussion in the Pentagon, in spring of 1965, I had been one of those in favor of sending United States combat forces to Vietnam. ... After 10 years as a cold warrior, at Rand and in the Marines before that, I had a personal desire to best the Communists, this once, this place. ... I could not believe that the United States could fail in the end to solve the problem that the French had not solved. Well, I am disabused of that notion now."

Russo, when the hostess comes round, orders a glass of milk.

"Milk?"

"Yes, I'm fasting." (In protest, just then, against the suppression of the Attica prison riot.)

Patricia, who has come direct from New York, meets them at Executive House, over in the Loop, and they are caught up in the excitement of a press conference and escape at the last moment to rush to Orchestra Hall for the "American Peace Awards." Lukas joins them later "in their red velvet-lined box for what turns out to be a gaudy extravaganza, a kind of Academy Awards of Peace." He goes on to say that "outside" on Michigan Avenue, a giant spotlight probes the Chicago sky. Inside, more spotlights pick up the winners as they come on stage beneath a huge Peter Max banner (four white doves fluttering around a young girl seated on the edge of a flower-bedecked cliff) and walk down red carpets to a microphone at center stage where the master of ceremonies, Ramsey Clark, presents them with the golden awards. A rock group, a folk singer, poetry readings and recitations from the Catonsville Nine transcript stretch the production to four hours. "But Dan seems to enjoy every minute of it."

Joan Baez, the folk singer, injects an added kick when she takes up two American flags by their poles and places them flat on the floor. "These flags are an obscenity," she asserts. "They are not sacred. Our lives are sacred." Applause from some -- the 1,200, but Businessmen for Peace (Business Executives Move for Vietnam Peace) object and since they are putting up ("up to $25 an orchestra seat") the flags are put back up.

Ellsberg gets a prize and, rising to speak, is carried away by enthusiasm. He grabs Russo, hauls him to his feet and introduces him, which, Lukas observes "proves to be a mistake." Russo rambles on for nearly 40 minutes before anybody can get him back down.

Finally, everybody is invited -- Ellsberg, Pat and their group -- over to "the famed Playboy Mansion" by Hugh Hefner for a late snack. Joan Baez and Dr. Spock bow out, but Ramsey Clark, Pete McCloskey, the Presidential candidate, John Kerry, the "peace" organizer, Prof. George Wald, Wayne Morse, the former Senator, and Russo troop along. They gather "in the great baronial hall," and Hefner, "in black slacks and embroidered shirt, greets his guests at the door." No bunnies, but there is one "striking blonde who is introduced as January's Playmate, and several other women guests." Well, what do you do at The Mansion? We rely on reporter Lukas to inform us:

"After an hour of drinking, some people begin drifting downstairs to the heated pool and cozy bar which looks into the pool's blue waters through a large window. I am sitting at the bar talking with Patricia and John Kerry when suddenly Dan appears at the window in one of the Mansion's brown bathing suits, making fish eyes at Patricia. A few minutes later he is followed by Tony Russo and George Wald. I turn back to the bar when I hear a little giggle from Patricia. Turning around, I see two naked women at the window. A tableau of the American peace movement in 1971 -- Ellsberg, Russo, Wald and four breasts bobbing in their wake."

But don't get excited. Reporter Lukas assures us "it's all antiseptic. No real sex, not even any touching."

Finally, at 3:30 a.m., "only Hefner, Tony, Dan, Patricia and I are left," and at 3:45 Hefner sends his guests home in his chauffeured limousine. And so it goes in the life of Ellsberg. Leaving out the trappings of rhetoric and proselytizing and the theatrical effects, what are we to make of it? What can we think, or feel, aside from revulsion?

Ellsberg, as the epitome of something that glitters, does not stand examination. It's not what you are politically, from Conservative to Communist, being against him per se if you are a Conservative and for him if you are a revolutionary of the Far Left. There is something more basic in the very nature of a human being which comes to life in reporter Lukas' most revealing character study.

When Ellsberg arrives at Chicago's O'Hare Airport, he is met, we are told, by "two black men representing Business Executives Move for Vietnam Peace." During the drive to the hotel, Ellsberg "tries to put them at ease."

"I was born here," he says. "I used to play in Lincoln Park."

"Oh yeh," the driver says. "Over there by the Gold Coast where the rich people live."

January 21, 1972

Ellsberg smiles nervously.

But later, in New York's Greenwich Village, the more radical element speak their misgivings, and one of them, Eric Mann, "a former Weatherman," is quoted this way by Lukas in something Mann wrote last summer: "We shouldn't get carried away with enthusiasm for the man. ... Hundreds of thousands [?] of my comrades are buried in Vietnam because of the Ellsbergs who ran this country. The first step in Ellsberg's radicalization was not an attack of moral scruples, but the gnawing, horrible fear that he was a loser, that he had picked the wrong side."

It is helpful to remember the classical Marxist distrust of the bourgeois, a doctrinaire rejection that would seem to leave no door open for the Ellsbergs of instant conversion. The classical Marxist sees nothing good or even redeemable in middle class, marketplace society, in its morality or protestations of repentance. In the "movement" there would be only anarchy, which explains, possibly, why the campus rebel seems better motivated in that direction.

Ellsberg left U.S. Government service to work for the Democratic nomination of Robert Kennedy for President. When Kennedy was killed, Ellsberg literally hit the beach, and discovered girls. Lukas has him writing:

"So I spent the summer with girls. What I was doing with one girl after another was trying in some way to remind myself ... that one could have purposes or satisfactions that were entirely apart from politics."

This begs for elucidation, and Lukas obliges with a quote from "one of Ellsberg's oldest friends [not identified] who visited him in Malibu that summer." The friend recalls:

"He'd take you aside at every opportunity and tell you how he'd suddenly discovered that it was nice on the inside of a woman's legs, as though he was the first person to find that out. Of course, that's typical of Dan. Ever since I've known him, he's had this almost evangelistic need to communicate to you the truth he'd just discovered. I suspect, that's the way it was with the Pentagon Papers. He couldn't stand having the truth he'd discovered in them hidden from the public view."

And so with this profile study of Ellsberg, The Times editors do confound us. This is a fine piece, this Lukas study of Ellsberg. But we ask why? Why did they run it? The Times editors themselves have been accused of proselytizing, you know. Are we to look for a hidden purpose? The result has been to present the naked structure of the man, and at the same time to bedeck him, like a Christmas tree, with the cliché emblems of liberalism, "social justice" and other abstracts gilded and tinsel. The structure doesn't support the gilding.

Did The Times deliberately give Ellsberg the long needle? Could they be that subtle?

One possible result stands out. The New York Times Magazine piece of last December 12 has effectively lifted any halo Daniel Ellsberg might ever hope to wear.

by JOHN J. ALESSIO

On August 7, 1950, about six weeks after the outbreak of the Korean War, the Daily People's World, an official Communist Party newspaper in California, described on page 3 a "peace rally organized by the Filmore Section of the Communist Party in San Francisco." Jerry Stoll was chairman of the rally.

On March 7, 1969, the Militant, radical Leftist publication, described on page 4 the recent visit to Cuba of "Mike Myerson of the Communist Party, USA."

Jerry Stoll is President of American Documentary Films.

Michael Myerson is international director of American Documentary Films.

On September 15, 1971, American Documentary Films announced it had begun production on a film tentatively entitled, "THE PENTAGON PAPERS AND AMERICAN DEMOCRACY," which, say the producers, "will explore these issues with Dr. Ellsberg." American Documentary Films goes on to state, "Now is the time for our friends in the movement for peace and social justice to make their commitment by supporting this very important education project."

Also in September 1971, Medea's Journal, self-described as dedicated to "revolutionary alternatives in Media," announced, "A FILM ON DANIEL ELLSBERG." Medea announced:

"Daniel Ellsberg and Jerry Stoll, President of American Documentary Films, have announced that a one-hour film, featuring Dr. Ellsberg, will be produced during the month of September. ... The filming will take place in Cambridge, Massachusetts -- Dr. Ellsberg's home -- and will be ready for release on October 1st, 1971.

"Final arrangements for the film project were made in Los Angeles, where Dr. Ellsberg was indicted in Federal Court on August 16th. Dr. Ellsberg spent the rest of the week there investigating the treatment of his friend, Anthony Russo, after Russo's confinement by the Grand Jury..."

Medea's Journal went on to explain, "American Documentary Films is a non-profit educational media organization distributing films to schools, churches and community groups across the country." American Documentary Films has described itself as "guerrilla cinema." It has been a main distributor of the controversial film "The Selling of the Pentagon."

Recently, American Documentary Films announced that its production of the Ellsberg film was delayed and said it is now scheduled for release on February 1, 1972. "Demand for the Ellsberg film is enormous," said a spokesman in the New York City office last month, "especially at schools and on university campuses. Bookings have to be made a month in advance."

The main office of American Documentary Films is at 379 Bay Street, San Francisco. The first film produced by the organization was "Sons and Daughters" about the violent student demonstrations at Berkeley. At a luncheon given by Reverend William Sloan Coffin of Clergy and Laymen Concerned About Vietnam, July 9, 1968, New York City, guests were asked to contribute to that group so it could turn over the funds to American Documentary Films.

At the luncheon, Jerry Stoll said his organization's film "Sons and Daughters" had been shown to more than a million people and was designed to educate parents by showing them how they could learn to follow in sons' and daughters' demonstrating footsteps."

As of September 15, 1971, the officers of American Documentary Films were listed as:

JERRY STOLL
President

DAVID CASTRO
Vice-President

RALPH DIAMANT
Production Director

KAY ANDERSON
Office Director

LALLY GRAUER
Staff Coordinator

SARA NELSON
National Distribution Director

BOB PAYNE
National Communications Director

MICHAEL MYERSON
International Director

TOM BROM
National Promotion Director

American Documentary Films says a contribution to its organization will enable it to continue its program to "expose" the Pentagon. For this, Jerry Stoll and Mike Myerson are only doing what comes naturally, nationally and internationally, by trying to make Ellsberg into a movie star, a role for him vaguely referred to by J. Anthony Lukas in the New York Times Magazine last December.

HEARING HELD BEFORE JUDGE W.M. BYRNE, JR., USDC, LOS ANGELES, JANUARY TWENTY EIGHT INSTANT, ON RUSSO'S MOTION TO DISMISS INDICTMENT BASED ON FACT HE HAD BEEN GRANTED IMMUNITY TO TESTIFY BEFORE GRAND JURY. JUDGE BYRNE DENIED DEFENSE MOTION AND STATED THE IMMUNITY WOULD ONLY HAVE APPLIED HAD RUSSO ACTUALLY TESTIFIED. RUSSO NOT PRESENT AND WAS REPRESENTED BY PUBLIC DEFENDERS MICHAEL BALABAN AND BARRY PORTMAN.

AFTER DISMISSAL OF MOTION, JUDGE BYRNE ASKED ATTORNEY REPRESENTING ELLSBERG, ARTHUR BERMAN, BASED UPON HIS CONVERSATIONS WITH BOUDIN, WHO IS REPRESENTING THE BERRIGANS IN HARRISBURG, IF HE HAD ANY ESTIMATE AS TO HOW LONG THE HARRISBURG TRIAL WOULD TAKE. BERMAN STATED HIS BEST ESTIMATE WOULD BE FOUR MONTHS AND THAT BOUDIN WOULD LIKE TWO OR THREE WEEKS AFTER THAT TO REST UP AND HAVE HIS "PEACEMAKER RECHARGED."

BYRNE INSTRUCTED GOVERNMENT AND DEFENSE ATTORNEYS TO SET UP A SCHEDULE FOR FILING OF MOTIONS, GOVERNMENT RESPONSES AND HEARINGS ON MOTIONS, AND TO ESTIMATE WHEN THEY WOULD BE READY FOR TRIAL. ATTORNEYS AND JUDGE BYRNE MET IN HIS CHAMBERS AND SET FOLLOWING DATES: HEARING ON DEFENSE MOTION FOR DISCOVERY, FEBRUARY TWENTY NINE NEXT; HEARING ON DEFENSE MOTION TO DISMISS, FEBRUARY ELEVEN NEXT; AND TRIAL DATE, MAY NINE NEXT.

DEPARTMENTAL ATTORNEY DAVID NISSEN ADVISED ELLSBERG'S ATTORNEYS STATED BOUDIN WOULD MUCH RATHER HAVE A TRIAL DATE IN AUGUST NINETEEN SEVENTY TWO. THIS WAS REJECTED BY JUDGE BYRNE. NISSEN NOTED THIS TRIAL DATE WAS REQUESTED IN JUDGE BYRNE'S CHAMBERS AND WHEN BERMAN WAS ASKED IN OPEN COURT FOR AN ESTIMATE, HE GAVE FOUR MONTHS PLUS TWO OR THREE WEEKS. IT WAS NISSEN'S OPINION BERMAN WAS RETICENT TO INDICATE AN AUGUST DATE IN FRONT OF THE PRESS.

INFORMATIVE NOTE

Date January 29, 1972

Attached summarizes proceedings before U. S. District Judge yesterday relative to pretrial motions in the Daniel Ellsberg investigation.

On agreement between Government and defense attorneys, defense motion for discovery will be heard 2/29/72; defense motion to dismiss will be heard 2/11/72; and trial date set for 5/9/72. Leonard Boudin, attorney for Ellsberg who was also acting as an attorney in the Harrisburg trial, had wanted to postpone trial until August, 1972. This was not agreeable with the court.

Pertinent portions of attached will be included in our weekly summary to The White House, with copies being furnished to the Attorney General, his deputy, and the Assistant Attorney General, Internal Security Division.

Q19 Vermont Life Calendar for 1971 bearing hand printed notations

Result of examination:

Nothing of particular significance was noted which would aid in determining whether the questioned hand printed notations contained in specimen Q19 were placed on a day to day basis or that some or all were placed at one time.

Nothing of particular significance was noted to indicate that a page or pages were added or removed from specimen Q19.

Because of the thickness of the pages comprising specimen Q19, indented writing was negligible.

The submitted material is returned herewith. Photographs have been made.

DANIEL ELLSBERG

On January 31, 1972, a confidential source, who has furnished reliable information in the past, advised as follows:

Daniel Ellsberg made a fund-raising appearance in Minneapolis, Minnesota, on Friday night, January 28, 1972. He delivered a public speech at Augsburg College followed by an appearance as guest of honor at a cocktail party hosted by former Minneapolis Mayor Arthur Naftalin at the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis.

Source attended the speech given by Ellsberg at Augsburg College. An admission fee of $1.50 per person was charged. Ellsberg spoke for a little more than an hour. His style was extremely "low key".

Ellsberg made the following remarks:

He disclosed the contents of the so-called "Pentagon Papers" after realizing the futility of utilizing conventional channels to end the war in Southeast Asia. He had previously given the papers to a number of U. S. Senators who held the papers for more than a year without taking any action. He thus became convinced that it was necessary for him to expose the details of the Pentagon Papers to the public.

Ellsberg further maintained that the public was entitled to the data in the documents known as the Pentagon Papers. He said there was no justification for these documents being classified.

65-74060-3071

ENCLOSURE

DANIEL ELLSBERG

Following his speech, Ellsberg was questioned as to what action one could take to end the war in Southeast Asia. He replied, in effect, that he had "done his thing" and had failed to end the war but would continue to act to bring about the cessation of the war. He said that he could only advise that each person follow the dictates of his conscience in opposing United States involvement in Southeast Asia.

About 2,000 persons attended Ellsberg's speech. He received a standing ovation at the conclusion of his address.

The January 29, 1972, issue of "The Minneapolis Star", a daily newspaper published in Minneapolis, in an article captioned "'Dan' Ellsberg--he failed, fights on", states that Ellsberg raised about $4,000 for his defense while in Minneapolis. This article quotes Ellsberg as saying "He was prepared to reveal the Pentagon papers in St. Paul in January 1970 when Ellsberg testified at the trial of two of the Minnesota Eight. They were charged with and convicted of interfering with the Selective Service System. But the judge, Philip Neville of the U. S. District Court, who did not know Ellsberg possessed the explosive documents, refused to let him speak of 'deception' by the government. So Ellsberg waited for the next propitious time. It came more than a year later."

This document contains neither recommendations nor conclusions of the FBI. It is the property of the FBI and is loaned to your agency; it and its contents are not to be distributed outside your agency.

ReWFOtels 1/31/72 and 12/28/71 and BStel 1/21/72.

Referenced WFO teletype dated 12/28/71 contained information reportedly pertaining to the acquisition of the "Pentagon papers" by the "Christian Science Monitor" (CSM), noting that this information had been furnished by [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] According to [REDACTED], the "Pentagon papers" were delivered to the CSM on an unrecalled date between 9 and 10 p.m. and attached to the cartons containing them was a "resume" by Daniel Ellsberg which [REDACTED] believed was a certification by Ellsberg as to the authenticity of the documents contained in the cartons. [REDACTED] also indicated that the editor of the CSM had contacted the "Boston Globe" regarding the documents delivered to the CSM. Available data indicates the "Boston Globe" received portions of the "Pentagon papers" on 6/21/71 and that CSM obtained them on 6/26/71, indicating possibility the documents were furnished CSM by the "Boston Globe."

Referenced Boston teletype advised that [REDACTED] had been interviewed relative to the aforementioned data but claimed no knowledge of the manner in which the "Pentagon papers" were delivered to the CSM or when such action occurred.

probably have not been privy to details surrounding receipt of the "Pentagon papers" but it is very possible he subsequently learned of this information on hearsay basis. In this connection Bureau notes [redacted] advised on 9/2/71 that while she had no personal knowledge of the acquisition of the "Pentagon papers" by CSM she had learned of certain details concerning this matter and she identified a number of CSM employees as having been initially involved in the receipt of these documents. [redacted]

Since the information attributed [redacted] may have become general gossip at CSM following interview of [redacted] Boston should also recontact her and determine whether she can corroborate or disprove this information.

Handle promptly advising Bureau, Los Angeles, and WFO of results.

NOTE:

Exact manner in which "Pentagon papers" were distributed to various newspapers, including CSM and "Boston Globe" during June, 1971, has not been determined. Information attributed to [redacted] if true constitutes important evidence as [redacted] has alleged Daniel Ellsberg accompanied portions of "Pentagon papers" furnished to CSM with a certification as to their authenticity. Since [redacted] appears unable or unwilling to discuss this data with Bureau Agents, we are requesting additional interview of individuals who may be in position to either prove or disprove this data.
